Sending a file from one server to another using php I have a couple of web servers sitting behind a firewall. I need to send a file between two of these web servers. The file should be sent via the web service and any other communication like email should not be considered. I am running Windows 2008 and IIS. I am also looking for a way to send the file to any web server i.e. the other web servers are sitting behind a firewall and they should receive the file as well. Please let me know if there are any recommendations on how to accomplish this. A: You need a way to transfer the file to a remote server. You could use FTP if you have any control over the remote machine. If you have no control over the remote system, then you would have to create a solution on the local machine to accept the request for the file, transfer the file, and then send a request back to the remote machine. Or you could just use an email. Send the file as an attachment, and then have the remote machine simply look in it's file system for the attached file. New pre-voting polls suggest that the Labour Party is on course to win the General Election. Sky News conducted a pre-voting poll with 40,000 people on a representative sample of the UK population. The results are that 48 per cent will vote Labour, 33 per cent Conservative, 9 per cent SNP and 4 per cent Liberal Democrats. Taken overall, the poll suggests that the government is on course to be the third-largest party in terms of number of seats, with an estimated total of 323 MPs. Labour is on course to be the largest party with 326 seats, down from its current total of 331. The Conservatives are projected to be the second-largest party, but with 265 seats, up from 254. Overall, it is thought that these results would put the Conservatives in a better position to 82157476af
